Is Mystery.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Cleveland.—A vigorous search for the tug Cornell, which disappeared last Thursday, was continued Tuesday, notwithstanding that the vessel with its crew of eight practically was given up as lost Monday night. Not all the families of the members of the crew had given up hope.

Action on orders from Washington, H. B. Shaver, superintendent of the government flying field here, was taken to aid in the search Tuesday.

With Fly Over Lake.

Mr. Shaver planned to assign at least one airplane to fly over Lake Erie. The tugs Tennessee and T. C. Lutz, which put into Ashtabula harbor, after working along the shore westward from Erie Monday, and several other tugs also were ready to resume the search.

The cause of the disappearance remains a mystery. No report of any defect in the boat has been made within recent weeks, according to Captain Thomas V. Gould, U. S. minister of bulls. The boat was inspected in August and was pronounced seaworthy, he said. Captain Gould said an investigation will be started as soon as the vessel is officially reported lost.

Repairs were made to the firebox last Wednesday, according to Captain Thomas Johnson, mechanical superintendent for the Great Lakes Towing Company, former owner of the tug. A

Dry Agents Under

Civil Service, Is

Appeal of League

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison.—The Wisconsin Anti-saloon League Tuesday urged Senators La Follette and Lodge to support passage of the senate bill now before congress which, if enacted, would place prohibition enforcement agents under civil service. The bill, according to the league letter addressed to the Wisconsin senators, would take the agents out of politics.

Under the present system, prohibition agents are chosen, in most places, because of their political qualifications rather than their fitness for the position, the league letter declared. Many agents, knowing the effect of political influence, hesitate to enforce the law aggressively and without fear or favor.

Civil service gives these agents the largest amount of personal security in the performance of their duty.

Iaousine.—A vigorously worded protest against the decision of the Near East conference subcommittee on minorities, to permit the Armenian delegates to appear before the subcommittee, was forwarded to the conference today by the Turkish delegation.

Thus a new discordant note marked the resumption of the peace negotiations after the Christmas recess. The subcommittee on minorities had planned to receive the Armenian and Bulgarian delegations this afternoon. The Armenian delegation to explain their demands for an Armenian home and the Bulgarian delegation to see forth the position of the Bulgarian residents of Eastern Thrace, which is passing to Turkish sovereignty.

Protest of Ottomans

The Ottoman protest read in part:

"In the official program for today, which was received by our delegation, I read not without surprise that the Armenian and Bulgarian delegations will be heard at the end of the last meeting of this subcommittee. I presented objections to your plan to hear the Bulgarian delegation and it was agreed that the Bulgarians

SENATOR-ELECT IS DEAD IN SUPERIOR

Ole G. Kinney Dies After Long
Illness; Cuts La Follette Strength.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Superior, O.—Ole G. Kinney, state senator-elect from the eleventh state senatorial district including Douglas, Bayfield, Washburn and Burnett counties, died at 3 a. m. Tuesday, following a lingering illness. He was president of the Community Savings bank here.

Mr. Kinney was born at Colfax, Dunn county, 64 years ago, and resided there until six years ago, when he moved to Eau Claire. Three years ago he came to Superior and engaged in the banking business.

Special Poll Seen.

The death of Senator-elect Kinney will necessitate a special election in the 11th Wisconsin district, to fill the vacancy which now exists, the outcome of which will have an important influence on the 1924 Wisconsin legislature.

Senator Ray J. Nye, incumbent, who was defeated at the primary by Mr. Kinney, has intimated he will be a candidate if the governor calls a special election. His election would give the forces opposed to the administration 16 votes in the upper house, while cutting down the administration vote, according to those said to be informed.

FORT ATKINSON RECORDS

During the month of December, the milk from 300 cows in the Fort Atkinson Cow Testing association was tested. High herd honor for the month were captured by Charles Shuman, his nine cows averaging 104 pounds of milk, 41.5 pounds of fat. Second place was won by Royal Sengbusch, his herd of 12 Holsteins, milk averaging 115.5 pounds of milk, 39.5 pounds of fat. The third place went to George Johnson, Lyle, and George Marshall, Whitewater. This sire's dam had an official record for the year of 21,037 pounds of milk, 4.25 per cent fat, 117.83 pounds butterfat in 355 days. Both John and Clarence Pester made several good official records during the month.

AMERICAN FARMER IS "COMING BACK"

So Says Eugene Meyer, Manager Director War Finance Corporation.

Washington—American agriculture in 18 months has effected one of the most sensational economic recoveries in history. Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the War Finance corporation, declared in his annual report to President Harding.

"The farmers and stockmen are not yet completely out of the woods, but in spite of local difficulties here and there, and unsatisfactory markets for some commodities, their position on the whole, has been greatly strengthened," Meyer said. "They are still suffering from a burden of debt, and some aftermaths of the crisis, and some thousands of bankrupt institutions in the country districts are in an over-extented condition. But probably at no time in our history has there been so rapid and extensive an improvement in our economic position as during the past 18 months."

"Deserter," Year Ago—Meyer described the "agricultural situation a year ago, when the corporation commenced to aid agriculture as a 'desperate plight' and declared that the "stability of our whole agricultural and banking structure was seriously threatened."

The War Finance corporation immediately sought out the weakest spots in the situation, and said, and applied to them the stimulus of needed credit. Its presence in the field was immediately reflected by a renewed confidence among agriculturists.

See Encouragement.

The growth of cooperative marketing associations, Meyer declared, is one of the most encouraging developments in the market of agricultural products in recent years, for it promises to bring about definite and far-reaching improvements in our whole system of distributing farm commodities.

"They have established methods which will facilitate the gradual, orderly marketing of many of our staple commodities."

NEW DUROC SIRE IS PURCHASED BY HUGHES—Washington Sensation, sire by Ames Sensation and out of Cherry Orion Lady, is the new Duroc-Jersey sire on the farm of William Hughes & Son, east to Green Onion Sensation. The boar traces back to Green Onion Sensation and was purchased recently from Cheif Phillips Dolavan.

There are 120 head of Durocs now on the Hughes farm. It is the intention to cull out the gilts and put a finish on them for the sale, the first life breeders have held.

Hughes & Son have 20 head of Holsteins, largely all their own raising, which were tested the past week.

The Durocs are the only department of the farm and there is no question but when the herd has the right type, more meat will put the gilts into top condition. The old sire used was Homestead Orion's Sensation, sired by Great Orion and out of Cheif Blossom II.

FEELING ITS WAY IN FOREIGN POLICY

Economic Principle Underlies Activity in Europe's Affairs at Present.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright, 1922, by JANESEVILLE DAILY GAZETTE.

Washington—America's foreign policy is developing—not changing. The most interesting attitudes are being assumed by those who fought for and those who fought against a so-called "isolationist" policy. No less a person than President Harding himself tabooed the word "isolationism" in referring to the scope of American policy in the future.

Is this a break with the "irreconcilables"? Is it inconsistent with the movement which led ratification of the covenant of the league of nations by the American senate? The answer given by administration officials is an emphatic negative. And as proof of their contention they ask the people to go back to the round-robin of March, 1919, signed by approximately 40 republican senators under the leadership of Mr. Lodge of Massachusetts. That document, and its opposition to the covenant of the league, "in the form now proposed" but under no circumstances did it denounce the principle of international co-operation. In fact it urged that peace between the allies and Germany be concluded and that the proposal for a league of nations to insure the permanent peace of the world should then be taken up for careful and serious consideration. It went on to say that it is the sense of the senate "that the nations of the world should unite to promote peace and general disarmament."

Harding's Signature

Among the signers of the round-robin are Warren G. Harding of Ohio, Senator George W. Johnson of California and William E. Borah of Idaho and Frank Bannister of Connecticut.

Every move the administration has made in foreign policy has been consistent with that doctrine. It is contended, and there is a distinct tendency nowadays to argue that the purpose has always been the same, though admissions are that the administration was not so much inclined to work out its policy a year ago as it is today.

European Policy

In other words, the swing of the pendulum toward an interest in the affairs of Europe and the world generally has been gradual. The need for an export market, the hope that farm products will find a market in Europe, the purchasing power is restored, the natural expectation that higher farm products will remove the principal causes of discontent in the middle west and take away the chief thorn in the side of the republican administration today—all this has made the foreign situation seem as important as a domestic problem.

It is the economic school of thought which has succeeded today in bringing the facts of international co-operation to the attention of the Harding administration, although the political entanglement remains the same as it did in 1919. The White House and department of state recognize the necessity of sitting in European councils for economic reasons. There are many who believe that this in itself will satisfy many of the so-called "preliminaries" that were never committed to the Wilson formula but wanted some formula.

The President's Policy

In place of the league of nations to promote peace, Mr. Harding promised "an association of nations" and he offers the four power pact idea and international conference as the best way to achieve that objective. He does not mean to induce association or leagues. As for economic co-operation, that is practically a question on which no specific formula has been evolved except to do for American interests all that can be done without committing the American people to an ultimate use of physical power to enforce obligations undertaken.

Elkhorn—The Book of Lake Geneva, edited by Paul E. Jenkins, found its way into many Walworth county homes on Christmas day. It is a wonderfully fine book both historically and mechanically, a chapter on Strunk, King of the Monarchs, was printed on vellum and completely covered with gold. Rev. Mr. Jenkins has been a summer visitor to Walworth county for a lifetime and his love and admiration for the county in general and Lake Geneva, in particular, has prompted the work.

Baptist, $227; Lutherans, $270; Catholic, $278; Episcopalian, $22; and Methodist, $270.

Some farmers made money in 1920. This statement was made by C. E. McNamara, member of the farm division of the Wisconsin college of agriculture, who spoke Friday night on a survey which he has made of 200 farms in the vicinity of Elkhorn last year. Grouping the farms according to acreage, 100-100 and 10-10 acres, he found that due to good management, some farms made money in 1920, despite adverse conditions, and where others lost, advocated more care for breeding and increased hog production and some high crops. Eight per cent of the income on farms was found to come from milk, a highly specialized form of farming. Inferior cows and poor feeding are reasons for losing, Mr. McNamara said, adding that better dairy cows and correct feeding will insure good returns. Not the size of a farm, but its management, makes it a profitable proposition, Mr. McNamara showed.

JANESEVILLE FEELS CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Good Cheer Pervades City; Many Families Cared for by Organizations.

Christmas, 1922, is a thing of the past. It passed with midnight Monday after 24 most enjoyable hours for most everyone in Janesville, a day in which the people were stimulated in bringing happiness to relatives and friends, the rich and the poor, when cares were forgotten in the joy of celebration when the spirit of Christmas predominated.

Prominently a children's day. Insofar as the home is concerned, there were few if any where an empty stocking dimmed childish joyous expectancy of what the day would bring. This was a result of activities of charitable and fraternal organizations and Gazette Goodfellows, who found it more blessed to give than receive. In the latter giving, they found the true spirit of Christmas.

Seventy-six families were cared for by the various organizations as follows: Salvation Army, 30; Baptist church, 15; Methodist church, 15; Associated Charities, 10; other churches and individuals, 10. Clothing and food was furnished by these and the Gazette Goodfellows presented toys.

The Elks furnished clothing for 20 families and, in some instances, it cost $100 for a family. It was given through the efforts of G. M. Stenzler. The Shuster company gave out ice cream for 25 families and the Big Jo Baking company's annual donation of 75 bags of flour was a help to local organizations.

Kids Are Entertained. Sixty boys and girls were entertained by George McKey at the Colonial club and to these children of poor parents he gave toys and candies. The names of the children were furnished from the Gazette list of needy folks. The Service Star Legion took care of 36 children sent from the Gazette list. An equal number received toys as did children on the Y. M. C. A. grounds. Entertainers, the Knights of Pythias are entertaining 50 more boys and girls and presenting them with toys and a good time. In all more than 200 children have received toys and books, candy and fruit and have known that there was indeed a Santa Claus in Janesville. Individual Santa's were less in number than last year but the group attention was greater.

Community Singing. Pre-Christmas celebrations were the community singing at the home fully lighted tree at Court and Main streets in the house next Saturday night by Prof. L. H. Stringer or Milton college. It was attended by a large crowd and was under the auspices of Miss Margaret Doane, director of girls community work.

Catolers from the Presbyterian church heralded the approach of the great holiday when they brought cheer to the sick in their homes on Christmas eve.

They presented a beautiful sight as Christmas dawned, with homes bedecked in tinsel, silver wreaths and evergreen. Candles burned brightly in many windows and other homes had electrically illuminated trees both in and out of the house. Midnight services at St. Mary and St. Patrick's Catholic churches and Trinity Episcopal church were attended by the usual large crowds. The Rev. Henry Williamson began his 32d year in the ministry with the midnight service. Services at churches Sunday and Christmas were well attended.

Weather Is Ideal. Weather on the day brought to the ponds about the city large numbers of outdoor sport lovers, who skated, slid and skied, many with those presented them Christmas.

Theaters presenting special Christmas attractions both matinee and evening were packed and crowds waited in lobbies for an hour or more.

In the home, Christmas was primarily a family day when the members were content to enjoy the company of others, many of whom came from a distance to be present at the reunion. With turkeys, geese, duck and chicken as the center of attack, almost every family had its Christmas dinner in the middle of the day. There were many large parties with out-of-town relatives present.

Continued celebration of Christmas will be seen in some of the churches this week when celebrations will be held.

would be received privately by the allies. Now I learn that you not only intend to receive the Bulgarians at the sessions of the subcommission, but also to hear the Armenians. I protest energetically against these audiences.

Despite the logical arguments which I furnished the other day in support of our position you have decided not to hear the Armenians as well as the Bulgarians.

The Armenian delegation is composed of Turkish subjects and it proceeds to represent Armenians who are Turkish subjects. To enter into contact with such a delegation would be equivalent to employing against these subjects of this same state. Any initiative or step in this direction will only encourage us to suspect the assurances which have been showered upon us in connection with the safeguarding of our sovereignty rights. Furthermore, it would be helpful to inquire what can possibly be the official character of the Armenians who have been invited and of what government they pretend to be the delegates.

PACT ABROGATION MOVE IS OPPOSED

Shipping Amendments Providing Direct Congress Action Are Attacked.

See, to bring about renunciation of leaders in the senate, although generally favorable toward abrogation of the score of commercial treaties held to impose restrictions upon American shipping indicated today that they would oppose the two shipping bill amendments proposed by Senator McFaddin, democrat, Tennessee, to bring about renunciation of the parts by direct action of congress.

Senator Jones, republican, Washington, who is in charge of the shipping bill, rejected his recent declaration in the senate that had abrogation of the treaties been brought about as directed by the merchant marine act of 1920, the shipping legislation now before the senate, probably would not have been necessary.

Held Wrong Time. Both Presidents Wilson and Harding, after consultation with the state department, held, however, that the treaties cannot properly be abrogated," he added. "In view of that I cannot believe this is the time or the pending shipping bill is the medium to bring about such abrogation."

small boats developed, he said; but it was properly repaired. Leaks of this sort occur frequently, he added, and are not ordinarily dangerous.

The tug left here Thursday afternoon for Buffalo, where it was to be delivered to representatives of a Syracuse firm which intended to use it on the Erie canal. It should have reached Buffalo Friday. The weather was clear, with but light wind.

HAZE AND FOG HINDER FISHING IN LAKE ERIE

Eric P. —A man searching the far reaches of Lake Erie, Tuesday, for the tug Cornell which has been missing for five days with her crew of eight, was hampered to work by a heavy haze and fog.

Marine men here who have followed the hunt for the boat since she disappeared last Thursday, expressed the belief that the Cornell had burned and sunk, pointing out that the tug, which had not been used for two years, was very dry when she put out to sea.

The disappearance of the Cornell recalls the fate of the car ferry boat Argonaut and Bessemer No. 2. She left Conneaut harbor on Dec. 2, 1919, with 32 men aboard, and never was seen again. A week later nine members of the crew, frozen to death, were found in a life boat. Bodies of the others were washed ashore at widely separated points.

COUNTY PROBLEMS FOR SUPERVISORS ON THE GRIDDLE

ing construction of a sanatorium without the means of financing has been adequately provided for either by bonds or direct taxation. The fact that the farmers of the country are signing for the bovine tuberculosis test of all cattle may have important bearing on the sanatorium question. The farmers take the attitude that before the county should spend so much money building a sanatorium, the county should first take necessary steps to eradicate the main cause of the disease in humans.

The committee appointed at the last meeting are due to make a report on whether the county should continue its present system of poor relief or go back to the old system of having each city and each township raise funds and administer the relief work in their own respective districts.

POOR RELIEF SYSTEM.

There will be arguments for both the old and new system. It is generally conceded the township should save money by going back to the old township system. The greater bulk of the relief work is now done in the cities and last year the amount expended in the Beloit district resulted in the agitation for a change. The Beloit answer is that Faneville incurs heavy expenditures for poor relief for the reason many cases are handled through the county poor farm.

H. E. Gilpin, president of the Great Lakes Towing company, which sold the tug to a Syracuse firm to which she was being delivered, announced at 1 p. m. he had received no report whatever concerning the fate of the Cornell.

SUPPRESSING THE WHISKEY REBELLION.

We had a "Whiskey Rebellion" once before in the United States. It was in 1794 and because the federal government imposed a revenue tax, four counties in Southwestern Pennsylvania refused to abide by the law and openly resisted collection. Citizens who upheld the law were assaulted and Whiskey Cap outrages were frequent. It grew to such limits that President Washington called out troops to suppress the lawbreakers.

We are passing through somewhat the same kind of a rebellion now with organized money-making and defiance of authority in bootlegging. There would of course be no bootlegger if there was no customer for the bootlegger. He who buys is equally culpable, morally and should be made so in fact before the law. Make buying illegal whiskey a crime and we will solve the bootlegger question in a short time. Get a few United States senators and others in high places up before the bar of justice and let them feel the stigma as well as does the peddler of moonshine, the rum runner and other crooks who are made possible by the rich and powerful.

Washington clearly saw the effect of this sort of lawlessness when he said that he called out the militia of the time because he felt "the most solemn conviction that the essential interests of the Union demand it that the very existence of government and the fundamental principles of social order are materially involved in the issue, and that patriotism and firmness of all good citizens are seriously called upon, as occasions may require, to aid in the effectual suppression of so fatal a spirit."

President Harding has also risen to the danger we have ahead on the republic's track, if we do not continue the enforcement of law. There has been a great reaction in the last month and the most serious effort is being made to suppress illegal liquor selling. They are even trying to clean the bootleggers out of the national capital and here the revelations show the trail of the slimy crook has been clear and marked for many months.

To every description of citizens, indeed, let justice be given. But let them persevere in their affectionate vigilance over that precious depository of American happiness, the Constitution of the United States. Let them cherish it, too, for the sake of those who, from every crime, are daily seeking a dwelling in our land. And when in the calm moments of reflection they shall have retraced the origin and progress of the insurrection, let them determine whether it has not been fomented by combinations of men who, careless of consequences and disregarding the unerring truth that those who rouse cannot always appear a civil convolution, have disseminated, from an ignorance or perversion of facts, suspicions, jealousies and accusations of the whole government.

This is medicine not only for the bootlegger and his customer but for the mob and murderers at Herrin, the Ku Klux Klan, the White Cappers, the secret enemies of the government, the communal radicals and the lesser radicals who would undermine and overthrow the constitution and all the rest of the soap boxes and law defilers wheresoever found or wheresoever from.

In District No. 10, town of Parish, Oswego county, New York, is a schoolhouse with a teacher drawing $80 a month. She has one pupil and one only. We can find schools all over the country with two, three and thousands of less than 10 pupils in attendance. We have some small schools in Wisconsin where the per capita cost from light attendance is out of all proportion. How many pupils are in your district school and how much is the per capita cost? What would be the saving under consolidation and how much greater benefit would come from such joining of forces with added equipment and stimulation of competition among the pupils? This might be worth discussing in front of the hot stove during the winter.

BANKS AS PUBLISHERS

BY FREDERICK J. HASKIN

Washington.—The ranks of book publishers in the United States have been greatly augmented by the banks. A bank may not appear to be a logical book publisher, but the managers of such institutions have come to the conclusion that they can keep themselves and their business facilities in the minds of the public by the publication of books.

The Old Colony Trust company of Boston recently published an interesting history of the landing of the Pilgrims and the early settlements of Massachusetts. A hundred thousand copies of this book were distributed. The Mercantile Trust company of San Francisco is publishing serially in its monthly magazine, a history of trade and commerce and development of the Pacific coast. Doubtless this will be issued in book form when the serial publication is completed, as in the case of novels published in installments. To cite an even more unusual case, the Continental and Commercial bank of Chicago not long ago published a book of nursery rhymes profusely illustrated in color.

As a rule the books published by banks relate more especially to subjects allied with banking. Many banks publish books in the form of manuals on federal taxation. Such books interpret the income tax laws in a manner which will make the filing of returns and the paying of taxes easier. The intended result is that the person receiving such assistance will have a good word to say for the bank from which he obtained his book.

The First National bank of Boston this winter is distributing a book on the markets of the world to its favored customers which would, in all probability, bring a price of $3 or $4 in a book-store.

The war was largely responsible for the entrance of the American banks into the book publishing business. The war increased the habit of reading among the American people. The fact that there was so much of importance to read, if one was to keep up with a rapidly changing world, had much to do with this so far as the people left at home were concerned. As for the soldiers, the activities of such bodies as the American Library Association, the Y. M. C. A. and other societies, which did welfare work, increased their reading. Hundreds of thousands of young men who previously had not had time or inclination for reading, found themselves frequently imprisoned in the cantonments, rest camps, or billets where time hung heavy. The welfare societies paged books at their disposal and many turned to reading who never had read much before. Some even learned to read in these camps. When these men returned, a liberal proportion of them retained the reading habit with the result that the American people are readers now as never before.

This gave the banks an opportunity to present their story whenever they had a story to present which would be helpful to customers or prospective customers. They capitalized the increased habit of reading to get people to read about business affairs. The benefit to the banks from such a policy is indirect, but the banks have felt that the effort and expense is worth making. Certainly the entrance of the banks into the book publishing business had added substantially to the libraries of the country and to the information of the citizens.

The educational factor in this publication business is not inconsiderable. For instance, a group of American banks published a book giving accurate digests of the German and Austrian peace treaties as soon as those historic documents were made available. Thousands of citizens probably never would have come into possession of full reviews of the treaty provisions had this book not been published. Similarly, a group of banks published a book embodying the more important statistics of the Fourteenth Census of the United States some months before the government issued the statistics in book form. Such enterprises were expensive and brought not direct return to the publishing banks.

To every description of citizens, indeed, let justice be given. But let them persevere in their affectionate vigilance over that precious depository of American happiness, the Constitution of the United States. Let them cherish it, too, for the sake of those who, from every crime, are daily seeking a dwelling in our land. JUST FOLKS

A BOOR AND A PIPE.

Give me a book and my cozy chair and a pipe of old pipe. And the wind may howl and I shall not care that the night is cold and bleak. For I'll follow my friend of the printed page wherever he leads me on the way to the vanished age and the joys of a life that's gone.

I'll stand with him on a brigantine with the salt wind in my face. I'll hear him shout when the whale is seen and share in the stirring chase. And I'll hear him say as the gull fly by and round us overhead: "Every bird in there with its ghostly cry is the soul of a sailor dead."

I'll go with him where the pole star gleams and the arctic nights are long. I'll go with him to his land of dreams away from the surging throng. I'll stand with him on the battle line where the sky with flame turns red.

I'll follow this faithful friend of mine wherever he wants to tread. Oh, whether it be adventure grim or the calm of a noble mind. Or a sea to sail and ship to trim or a pearl of truth to find. Grant me an hour in my easy chair and a pipe full of old perfume. And there's ever a friendly book up there that can furnish the joy I seek.

Who's Who Today

MASON MITCHELL

Mason Mitchell, the American consul at Malta, the Maltese Islands, who is recovering from a bullet wound received when an effort was made to assassinate him, has had a most colorful career. The shooting episode is a mere incident in the life of Mitchell who has been actor, writer, soldier, traveler and diplomat.

He was born in Hamilton, New York, in 1859. He was educated at St. John's school and Phillips Academy, starting his theatrical career at the age of eighteen at the old Broadway Theatre in New York and during his years on the stage he played with Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, John McCullough, Mine, Modjeska and Mary Anderson.

Mason then became chief of scouts under the Canadian government and fought through the Red River rebellion in 1885. He was promoted for gallantry. Then he started traveling through South America and South Seas writing and illustrating articles of travel.

After his travels he returned to the stage and became manager of the English theater for Richard Mansfield. Two years later he gave up the stage to join Roosevelt's Rough Riders and was wounded at Santiago. His first appointment as consul to represent the United States was at Zanzibar from 1902-05. From 1905 to 1908 he was at Chungking, China, and from then until 1910 he was consul at Apia, Samoa. He then moved to Queenstown, Ireland, for a year at the consulate there and last year he was given the post at Malta.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Pandora Nicholson is so painfully shy and self-conscious that it is almost agony for her to go into a room in which there are strangers. Her eyes are large and very dark, her hands small and white, and her nails a little too long and too pinkly polished. She keeps them this way deliberately, for their artificiality set off her white skin and dark hair and eyes.

To Be Continued.

Unexpectedly "Dora" makes one friend, Morton Nowberry; a shy and studious lad whom Gladys dislikes. They return one day from a walk to find Dora and Morton in the garden. Gladys sees that "Dora" and her father are sent alone to look after the farm and when she finds that Morton goes out to visit Dora makes her own family move out. Morton's parents pay little attention to Morton, eventually winning him away from "Dora."

Chapter 30

"Now tell me your name," Mrs. Gates began as they started to work. "Dora that is. Dora's my nickname. I've a full name, Aunt Maude doesn't like it." She hesitated, then gave it. "Pandora."

"Pandora!" It was music when the clear voice pronounced it. A very sweet name, though not after a very sweet character. But it suits you in a way, because one could nickname you Pan."

A tiny pink smile into the girl's cheeks. Pan! What a lovely name. Pan was a mischievous little god. Pan was a prankish creature who danced through the pages of story books—

"Yes, Pan, it's rather elfish, and so are you."

"I?" The girl's astonishment was overwhelming. "Elfish? why that would be more wonderful than to be beautiful, after all."

"Oh not in the black sheep. There are lots of us, you see, and Gladys is all the nice things."

"But you're the one that's getting married?" Peter had said he might sell because of the expenses of his daughter's wedding ceremony.

"Oh no—that's Gladys. No one would want—" she broke off. As though this exquisite lady would care about her!

The woman saw in a flash more things than Dora could have revealed in an hour. She was silent a moment, then tactfully changed the talk.

"Speaking of the appropriateness of names, mine is hopeless. It's Gloria. A deluded mother gave it to me when a baby, because my eyes were dark and my hair gold—or she thought it might be gold. A white hand went to her dark locks.

Dora, to make her, had given her some small tasks, such as arranging the china on the table, and tasks on the plate. She watched her while she worked.

Gloria Gates may or may not have been pretty. It depended upon whether she felt tired or not, whether or not she was pleased, and upon the general taste of the observer. Gloria had straight black hair—the straightest and blackest that Dora had ever seen. She wore it, usually, pulled straight back from her face, revealing most of her ears—which were small and very white, and all her low white forehead. She always wore earrings of the most bizarre style.

Her profile was too irregular for beauty, her mouth too large. Her skin was a fine milky white, un-

For Two Years, On Face, Itched and Burned. Cuticura Healed.

"I suffered for two years with pimples on my face. They were hard, large, red, and sometimes scabbed over. They were scattered all over my face, and when I washed them itched and burned dreadfully.

"I used different remedies without success. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Margaret Hoffmann, R. R. 2, Box 35, Birds-eye, Ind., Jan. 2, 1922.

TODAY'S RECIPES

Tonited Cheese Sandwiches make a substantial luncheon dish for either noon lunch or Sunday night dinner. One can use up stale pieces of bread and cheese and use the pinches. Make your sandwiches put them in a pan and toast on one side, then turn and toast on the other.

An hour before the meat party is done put pared potatoes into roaster around the meat and bake.

Waldorf Salad—One part of salad to two apples makes a good salad. Serve on lettuce or shredded cabbage and sprinkle nuts on top. Thin mayonnaise or a good cream dressing may be used, and if you have whipped cream to add to the dressing it makes an especially attractive and tasty salad.

At least half an hour should be allowed for each pound of pork roasted with onion and sage.

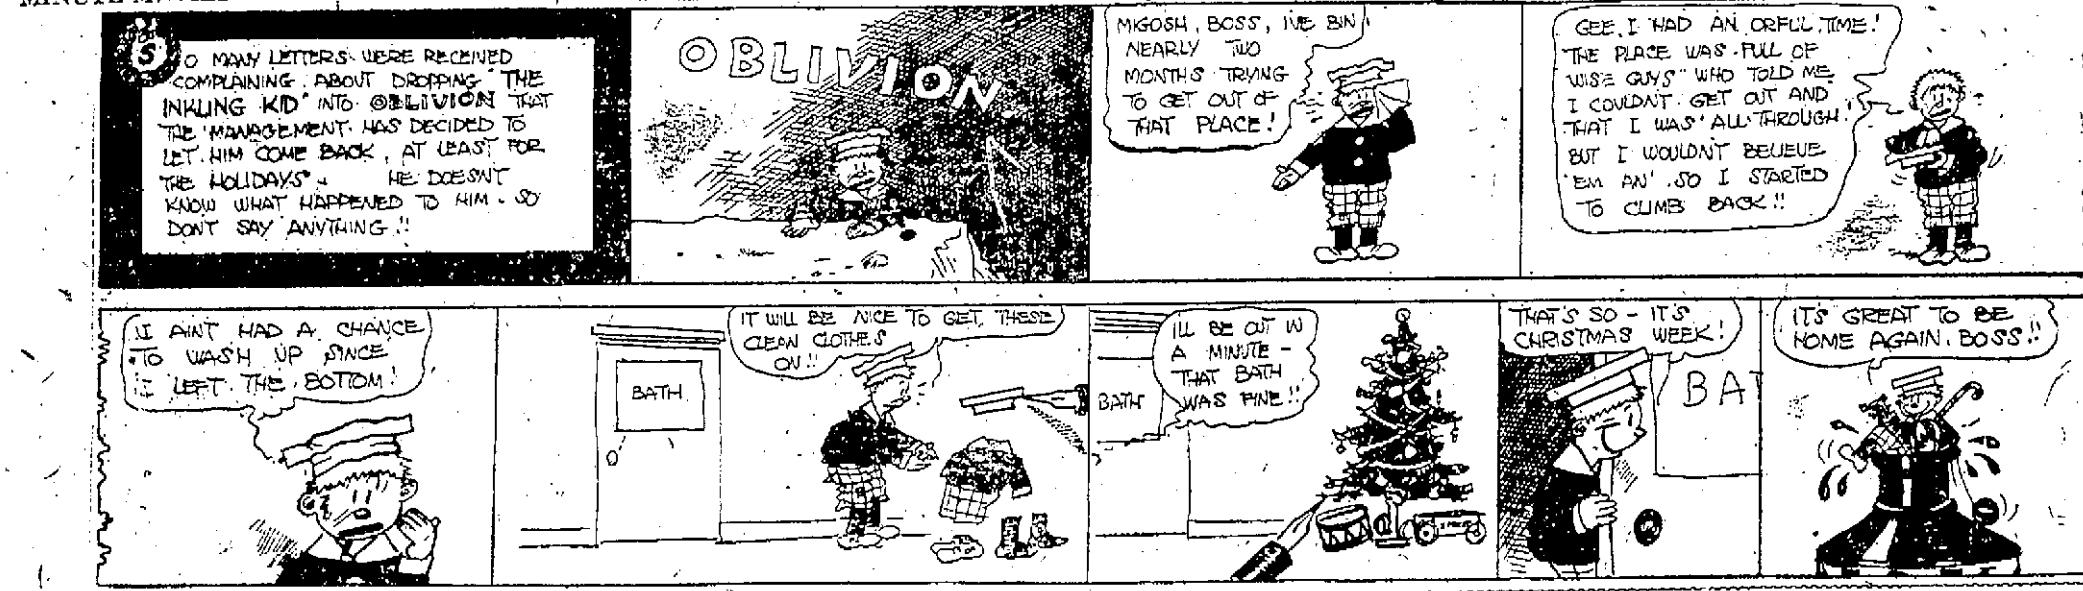

Devil's Food—This is very simple and economical. One cup sugar (granulated) and one-half cup butter, creamed together; add one egg, and one yolk of egg, two cups of flour for leaven. Sift three times, one and one-half cups flour, one-half cup sugar, one egg, two cups of milk, two eggs, and one-half cup butter.

Devil's Food Cake Icing—One whole unbaked, add confectioners or powdered sugar, working in with a spoon, until of light consistency. Add any flavoring.

DRESSING TABLE NOVELTIES

A friend of mine in Paris has sent, lovely for an elderly woman, silver on resin pink or deep violet.

Catherine—Exemptions should be treated by a physician and not left to home remedy experiments.

Sarah T. S.—Consult your dentist about the merits of the different toothpastes. If you cannot do this test some of the many antiseptic pastes on the market; most of them are excellent for keeping the gums firm.

Henry H.—When using a vibrator on the scalp give a deep treatment as is stimulating. You can get much the same effect by massaging the scalp yourself, but it will mean effort and should be kept up for longer time.

Try to make one for yourself. Buy some old wood. It's a beautiful lacquer job, with a spattered scrubby finish in gold over it. It looks as though someone had dipped it in with a brush of gold paint. And its handle—you wouldn't guess it—is nothing but a lovely gold tassel, the metallic gold tassel you can buy for a quarter in any trimming department. The bowl is round, has a lid, and is covered with a gold paint.
